West Germany's New Era of Instability

By John Vinocur

BONN, June 16 (NYT) -West Germany appears to be en-tering a period of political insta-bility that could threaten not only the government of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt but also the party system that has developed here since World War II.

The situation has been brought to a critical point by the defeat suffered in state elections June 4 by the Free Democratic Party, the small, liberal group that is joined with the chancellor's Social Democrats in the national governing coalition. The loss has contributed to a climate that could result by the end of the year in a proliferation parties on the left and the right, the emergence of a rightist fourth major party, the possible blockage of legislation by a con-servative upper house of Parliament, and, eventually, a government crisis. A member of Mr. Schmidt's inner circle termed the situation "new, troubling and

Failed to Win 5%

The Free Democratic Party's in national politics was called into question when it failed to win 5 percent of the vote in either Hamburg, where it had governed with the Social Democrats, or in Lower Saxony, where it shared power with the Christian Democrats. It was therefore automatically eliminated under the consultation from all parliamentary representation in the

The Free Democrats won 4.8 percent of the vote in Hamburg and 4.2 percent in Lower Saxony. In the last federal elections in 1976, the Free Democrats won 7.9 percent nationally, just enough when combined with the Social Democrats' 42.6 percent to give the coalition a 10-seat majority in the lower house of parlianient. The next national elections are in 1980, but the problems for Mr. Schmidt and the political system

The government faces the problem of getting its legislation past the opposition's majority in the upper house of Parliament. whose composition is determined by the pattern of control in the state governments. The Free Democrats' defeat in Lower Saxony means that it can no longer use its alliance there with the Christian Democrats as a bargaining point for getting the fed-eral coalition's bills approved.

Before their defeat, the Free Democrats were able through their state government coalition to bring pressure on the Christian Democrats so as not to hold up legislation in the upper house of the national Parliament after bills had been approved in the lower house, where a majority of Social Democrats and Free Democrats exists.

Even more significant is con-cern over a state election in Octo-ber in Hesse, where the Social Democrats and Free Democrats govern together.

If the trend continues and the Free Democrats are eliminated from the Hesse Parliament, the likelihood of a national government crisis would be great.

Many politicians in Bonn feel that the Free Democrats would conclude that their association with the Social Democrats had obliterated their image as a middle-road party and that they could remain a political force only by pulling out of the federal coalition. At the same time, Mr. Schmidt would be faced with the question of how be could in conscience continue to govern with three of his most important cabinet officers — Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Economy Minister Otto Lambsdorff and Interior Minister Gerhart

Italy Parties Start Search For a Successor to Leone

By Henry Tanner

ROME, June 16 (NYT) — Italy's leading political parties — the Christian Democrats and Communists — went out of their way today to create the impression that they will continue their de facto alliance and that the resignation yesterday of President Giovanni Leone will not lead to a political upheaval.

The Communist Party, which yesterday morning formally urged Mr. Leone to step down and thus sealed his fate, was particularly reassuring.

L'Unita, the party's newspaper, praised Mr. Leone for baving "refrained from playing the ann-Com-munist card in his resignation statement and praised him for accepting the inevitable with dignity and thus serving the country.

Democratic Unity

Italy, more than ever, was in need of "democratic unity," the Communist newspaper wrote.
"Democratic unity" and "unity of all democratic forces" are catch phrases often used to allude to the agreement under which the Communist Party has been supporting the Christian-Democratic minority government of Premier Giulio Andreotti.
The editorial was seen as an indication that the Communist leaders are eager to continue the agreement with the Christian Democrats which is the central feature of Italian politics now.

The Christian Democrats carefully refrained from attacking the Communists for their role in pre-cipitating Mr. Leone's resignation.

Yet, in spite of the official restraint, there is a wide expecta-tion that the campaign for the elec-tion of the new president will touch off a deeply disruptive process that the leaders of the two parties may find difficult to control, The balloting is secret, which al-

The election must begin 15 days from yesterday at the latest, under the constitution. Informed sources today said that the most likely date would be June 28. The leaders of both major parties will be under pressure from their own electorate to play it tough. The Communist rank and file is unhappy over the alliance with the Christian Democrats, and party

However, if the de facto alliance between the Communists and the Christian Democrats holds, the bers of the party who are expected new president will in all probability to seize the opportunity to make it be a Christian Democrat.

Newspaper commentators and politicians today were unanimous in naming party secretary Benigno Zaccagnini, Premier Giulio Andreotti and Amintore Fanfani, the Senate president who became acting president tonight, as the leading emergency powers to deal with a budget crisis.

The crisis erupted with a demand by some French-speaking coalition politicians for a linkage between the economic reforms and efforts to solve the country's longstanding regional and language problems.

The French-speaking Socialists argue that only by quickly granting autonomy to the French- and Dutch-speaking sectors of the country can the southern French-language Wallonia region deal with its economic problems. Wallonia has high unemployment because of the crisis in the steel industry.

Emergency Powers

Mr. Tindemans' center-right Social Christian Party argues that Belgian's budget problems are of such magnitude that special emergency powers must be introduced immediately. It says that to wait for normal parliamentary procedure on the crisis measures would take too long and not have any effect on this year's budget, and probably next year's as well.

Belgium's budget this year was introduced at $30 billion with a deficit of about $700 million. But tax receipts have fallen far below what was expected, and further hundreds of millions of dollars will have to be spent on restructuring the steel industry and paying unem-ployment benefits. The budget defi-cit this year could increase to $3 billion, with no improvement seen

According to political sources, Mr. Tindemans believes that taxes cannot be increased further without reducing incentives and furthering evasion. Mr. Tindemans proposes cutting budget expenditure by 2 percent and making severe cuts in social security expenditures.

The Socialists disagree on what cuts should be made, and argue that economic reforms will be ineffective without regionalization. Political sources said that if the government falls, it would be ex-tremely difficult to form another coalition. Anticipated elections are generally ruled out, too. In either case many months would be lost in carrying out the regional autonomy reforms and the economic-crisis

LISBON, June 16 (AP) - Parlia- partners in Mr. Soares' 4-monthment today banned fascist organ-izations amid an uproar following a legislator's assertion that the ban itself was fascist, The Assembly of the Republic closed its 1977-78 session, the second since the overthrow four years ago of a half century of fascist dictatorship, about dawn and began a four-month summer holiday. Legislators adopted a law forbidding organizations that support ideas and methods customarily associated with fascism and groups seeking the violent overthrow of democracy. Convicted group leaders could receive between 2 and 8 years in prison. Terms of up to 2 years were set for individuals found guilty of fascist activities.

The law reflected growing concern among members of the dominant Socialist Party of Premier Mario Soares that Portuguese democracy is threatened by increased political tension and the development of rightist splinter groups. Public clamor followed the fatal shooting of a leftist student last Saturday, when police broke up a riot between leftist and rightist demonstrators in Lisbon.

After rejecting two leftist-sponsored protest motions, the Assembly last night expressed regret over shooting. With conservatives and center-right Social Democrats abstaining a Socialist-Communist majority declared its aversion to demonstrations that show "hatred and fascist violence openly directed against the 1974 revolution."

The situation is an increasingly difficult and ironic one for Mr. Schmidt. While his personal popularity seems high, he is in most respects unable to control the political developments that could force him from office. In a direct election, the chancellor might win large numbers of Christian Democratic votes but these half lots are unlikely to be given to local Social Democratic candidates on whose individual victor ries Mr. Schmidt would be dependent in any new election.

White House Starts Drive To Back Carter on Zaire

By Bernard Gwertzman

- The administration has begun a public effort to substantiate President Carter's assertion Wednesday that he had "firm proof" of Cuba's involvement in training the Katangan rebels who invaded Zaire last month from bases in Angola.

Faced with repeated denials of Cuban involvement by President
Fidel Castro, and statements of skepticism about Mr. Carter's evi-dence from some members of Congress, the White House was con-cerned that Mr. Carter's credibility was being ehallenged, officials acknowledged yesterday.

Until now, the administration had refused to make public any documentation of the charges against Cuha. But starting Wednesday, presidential press secretary Jody Powell authorized private disclosure to reporters of the contents of a declassified memorandum written on June 2 by Herbert Hetu, the CIA's head of public information, that summarizes the administration's arguments. A CIA spokesman said yesterday that Mr. Hetu had not actually drafted the material but only conveyed it in memo form to the White House, which, the spokesman said, wanted "a sanitized" statement about the intelligence information.

No Details on Sources

The memorandum asserts that evidence from a wide variety of sources over the past two years re-futes Castro's denials of any direct or indirect involvement." But it lacks details on the sources of the CIA information, the withholding of which has produced the most criticism on Capitol Hill.

A Democratie member of the House, who requested anonymity, said: "I think an impartial jury would acquit Castro for lack of

The Katangans, members of the Lunda tribe that predominates in northeast Angola and southern Zaire, crossed into Shaba province in southern Zaire from Angola, via Zambia, on May 13 and captured the town of Kolwezi, which they left a few days later. In March of last year the Katangans also crossed into Zaire and were repelled two months later.

In the first days after the latest Katangan incursion, the Zaire gov-ernment charged that the Cubans were behind it. But the Carter administration would not confirm the contention until May 19, when a State Department spokesman, Tom Reston, said that new information had become available showing "recent" Cuban training of the rebels. It had been known - and acknowledged by Mr. Castro - that Katangans received Cuban training in 1975. But the Cuban leader, in a meeting with the chief U.S. diplo-mat in Havana on May 17, specifically denied recent involvement.

Since Mr. Reston's Statement, expanded by Mr. Carter on May 25 and again Wednesday, the administration has been trying to prove its

'ICA' Often Spells 'CIA' to Foreigners

By Ward Sinclair

WASHINGTON, June 16 (WP)

— The world is confusing U.S. flacks with U.S. spooks. In other words, the ICA, which is supposed to be clear and visible, is being mistaken for the CIA, which is supposed to be clear and invisible.

ICA is the acronym for the International Communication Agency.

national Communication Agency, which came into being April 1 as successor to the U.S. Information Agency, purveyor of the American Story overseas.
Under President Carter's reorg-

An early winner was Agency for International Communication. But AIC spelled backward is you-knowwhat, so that was rejected. ICA took its place and then the real confusion set in.

Foreigners are mistaking ICA for CIA. Overseas editorialists have poked fun. A professor on Taiwan wrote in to call the United States dumh for spreading confusion. Agency officials are dreaming up ways to advertise themselves without saying ICA.

with these things is to pass a law, which is exactly what Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., proposes to do, changing the ICA's name for the second time in less than three months.

John Reinhardt, director of the ICA, doesn't like the McGovern proposal one bit. He agrees that not everyone likes ICA, but to change the name again would cre-ate "incalculable confusion."

Sen. McGovern is undeterred. He is pushing ahead with his proposal, already approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to change JCA to U.S. Agency for Information and Cultural

Beyond the Katanga Tangle

President Carter's vigorous charges that Cuba bore responsibility for last month's invasion of Zaire were unworthy of U.S. diplomacy to begin with. They turned out to be unprovable except by a kind of guilt-by-association. They undoubtedly inflamed U.S. passion for no discernible good reason. And they threatened for a few days this week to embroil the U.S. presidency in another Tonkin-like test of credibility in which a proud and promising new president would have to tangle in the pits with, of all people, Fidel Castro. While pretending to be above such a scrap, Mr. Carter tossed a few more questionable punches on Wednesday, but if that was the price of his resolve to put the matter behind him and look to the future instead. we can all be grateful.

So just one more time around the busb: The Carter administration was eager from the start to assume that the Katangan invaders of Zaire were Havana's puppets. Yet Katangans, progressively supplied by Belgians. Portuguese and finally Angolans, have been trying for nearly two decades to dislodge the Mobutu regime or to dismember Zaire. Recently based among fellow Lunda tribesmen in Angola, and carrying Western as well as Soviet arms, they have kept at it. They have been tolerated and, indeed, encouraged, by the Angolan government because Gen. Mobutu has been giving aid and arms to its enemies. Many of the Katangans were undoubtedly trained by Cubans, whose forces stand guard over the Angolan regime. Cubans may have prepared the Katangans for the latest invasion, as Mr. Carter contends, and also discouraged them from it, as Mr. Castro now insists. So what?

With or without a Cuban involvement, Mr. Carter seemed determined to lend a hand in rescuing the Mobutu government, and giving its bankrupt treasury yet another infusion. Zaire is a mess and seems destined to remain a mess for a long time while Western interests — as foreign to Africa as the Cubans seek to salvage their investments in Katangan ores and Mobutu bonds. This may be a defensible enterprise but it is not a noble or boly one. And it has precious little to do with the seething black-white contests in southern Africa or the disturbing Soviet-Cuban intrusions in the Horn.

If Mr. Carter thought at first that the Cubans were behind this newest trouble, he should have known that they were merely picking at an old sore. By persisting in his angry charges, he was only playing upon dangerous emotions that even stronger presidents bave been unable to contain. By depending on what appears to be only circumstantial, and probably dated, evidence of Cu-ban complicity, be was risking his presidency's highest ambition - a compact of truth with the U.S. people — for what could never be more than a propaganda advantage. Why?

Defining the Cuban thorn as an ulcer has been tried before at the White House. It will end as disastrously in Africa as it bas repeatedly in the Caribbean. For all their protestations of brotberhood with anti-colonial Africans, the Cuban's capacity for intercontinental mischief depends entirely on Soviet diplomacy, money and logistics. If the United States bas a deep quarrel with Soviet conduct and purposes in Africa - as well it may - the place to bluster and to negotiate is in Moscow, although always with a sense of proportion about the stakes in Zaire or even Rhodesia as against arms control and other East-West connections. If Mr. Carter needs a justification for his own modest exertions and interventions in Africa, let them be calmly and fully placed before Congress. And if Mr. Carter needs to demonstrate toughness with one kind of Communist precisely to salvage SALT and other agreements with others, let him learn from this episode that red dye runs, uncontrollably, in the wash.

The president has said that Mr. Castro could have stopped the Katangan invasion even if he did not start it. Well, maybe, But Mr. Carter began by saying he did not intend to be drawn into a shouting match with the Cuban leader and he ended by saying that he wants to turn to the future. That will test the wisdom and responsibility of everyone's words and actions soon enough.

Spying by the Rules

The process of Soviet-U.S. relations comes down to a continuing quest to draw rules to keep competition within bounds. The pursuit of rules is acknowledged in regard to strategic arms. It is tacit in regard to espionage. Both sides long ago decided to spy — but within limits. Though they surely know or suspect who most of each other's agents are, they grant them entry and let them operate - while keeping an eye on them. The two governments shy from doing physical harm to each other's agents. Political things being equal, each hesitates to embarrass the other's intelligence service by exposure.

In recent months, of course, political things have not been equal. That's why the air has been unusually full of spy charges. By the Soviet version, which some U.S. officials privately accept, the United States bent the rules last month by arresting, publicizing and holding for trial on high bail - rather than quietly expelling — two accused Soviet spies.
The Kremlin quietly warned that "two can play at this game." When, soon, further publicity was given to discovery of a Soviet-operated electronic listening post in the U.S. embassy in Moscow, the Russians publicly protested this "artificial aggravation" of East-West relations. In quick sequence they disclosed that they bad quietly ousted an accused U.S. spy last July, and they pulled a U.S. businessman out of his car on a Moscow street on a reported smuggling charge. Apparently he was seized to be exchanged for the arrested Russians; regardless, we do not think his company, International Harvester, should do normal business with the Russians until he is free.

If the United States were prepared to forgo spying there, it would be in a position to crack down hard on Soviet spying here. But espionage conducted inside the Soviet Union remains an attractive and presumably useful supplement to intelligence operations carried Experience should have sbown what sort of operations - we refer to intelligence collection — bave a value worth the stress and risk of conducting. If that means the Soviet Union will continue to enjoy enhanced opportunities to collect intelligence here, then it is the task of U.S. counterintelligence to limit the damage. There is no particular benefit, we feel, in breaking the tacit rules by which these activities go on. The rules not only regulate intelligence operations. They also prevent intelligence activities from souring the climate in which rules on more important matters are pursued.

Live, From the House

A historic moment came and went almost unnoticed in the House of Representatives the other day. There weren't even many yawns since only 16 of the people's representatives were present as the House went on the air live for the first time. The enthusiasm of the broadcasters, too, was exceedingly well contained. Only a single network carried the proceedings, as live as they were, and then only for five minutes.

Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., disagreed with the honorable member who proclaimed the moment a historic one. Not so, he said, it was, rather, "a historic breakdown" in relations with the media, since only audio broadcasting was allowed. But would television coverage, cameras sweeping across the banks of empty seats, have added much to the enlightenment of the nation?

Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who fought and fought against permitting independent live television coverage and succeeded in having the House rather than the networks control the new TV system, can relax. If the first day of radio coverage is any kind of a guide, the House need have no fears: It will be saved from the perils of overexposure by its sheer dullness.

Taiwan: On Severing the China-U.S. Knot

By William Beecher

WASHINGTON — The Carter W administration is consider-ing selling 60 F-4 fighter-bombers, worth about $500 million, to Taiwan. Ironically, the move, if it is approved by President Carter, would be aimed at paving the way to extending full diplomatic relations to the People's Republic of China, which insists that Taiwan is one of its provinces temporarily beyond

Senior administration officials say that if the United States is to sever its formal diplomatic and military ties to Taiwan, the provision of more modern weapons would accomplish several things:

• It would shore up the self-defense capabilities of Taiwan against either invasion or blockade by mainland China. It would tend to undermine the arguments of critics in the Unit-ed States that the administration for the sake of expediency was turning its back on an old ally and leaving it vulnerable to seizure by Peking.

• It would serve as a warning to China that, as much as the United States wants to improve relations, it also is determined to maintain a military halance between China and Taiwan to discourage the use of force to resolve their difference.

'Obstacles'

On his recent mission to Peking. national security advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski told Chinese leaders that President Carter is "determined to join you in overcoming the remaining obstacles in the way to full normalization of our relations."

By using the phrase "to join you," officials say, the United States was attempting to stress that mutual efforts and accommodations were deemed necessary.

One such accommodation on China's part, they say, is to accept the continuation of a close U.S. economic, cultural, political and military supply relationship with Taiwan after the United States disestablishes formal governmentto-government relations and abrogates the Mutual Security Treaty with it.

Some administration officials are known to favor normalization of relations with China after the November elections, in part to show that as the United States moves ahead with a second SALT agreement with the Soviet Union, it is also seeking to improve its standing with the Soviet Union's other principal adversary, China.

After the Fote

But well-placed officials say that although the president has decided to try to take a number of steps toward normalization in the months ahead, he will not decide on the possible during of a move to establish format diplomatic tles with Peking until after the elec-

Administration sources say Taiwan first asked for 60 F-4s about four years ago to replace their aging squadrons of U.S. F-104 jet interceptors.

The United States at the time was reluctant to approve the sale in part becasue the F-4 is not only a good fighter, but also an excellent tactical bomber which could reach targets deep inside China.

Last year Taiwan actively explored the possibility of acquiring instead Israel's Kfir jet fighter which uses the same engine as the F-4, the General Electric J-79. But Washington, which would have bad to approve the sale because the engine is made in the United States, was cool to the idea. Diplomatic sources say Saudi Arabia, which supplies oil to Taiwan, opposed the deal. It was dropped earlier this in addition to new planes, therefore, the United States is also considering providing short range Harpoon anti-shipping missiles and small anti-submarine warfare vessels.

But it doesn't want to provide Taiwan with equipment that is superior to what China is expected to have by the mid-1980s. China is now producing the British Spey engine under license and is expected to design a new fighter for that power plant. The British use the Spey in their version of the F-4 question.

Sources say Brzezinski did not bring up the F-4 question in Peking, in part because the United States hasn't decided exactly what it wants to do and felt it premature to go into specifics with Chinese officials.

60 Divisions

A U.S. analysis of Chinese military capabilities concludes that while China has sufficient amphibious craft to ferry only three combat divisions across the Taiwan Strait, it would take about 60 divisions to successfully stomi the island fortress. Officials say there is no evi-dence of any significant buildup of amphibious capability.

A major military effort might, of course, bring the U.S. Seventh Fleet to Taiwan's rescue. But beyond the military equation, U.S. officials are persuaded that Peking wants good relations with the United States both as a counter to Soviet designs in Asia and as a source of technology to modernize its society, Military action against Taiwan could jeopardize those larger objectives, officials point out.

gains in the job market. Employment rose steadily and they increasingly creamed off good positions in the professions and husiness.

But efforts to legalize feminist views of rape and abortion met re-sistance in the courts and legislatures. After first advancing at a great clip, the Equal Rights Amendment fell into a decline which now seems certain to end in failure to change the Constitution.

As the demands for special minority rights waned, the reaction of the majority waxed apace: There was set in motion a populist wave featuring resentment of the minorities, and the institutions and leaders which had favored them. A fine current example is the so-called tax revolt. It is the negative response of

These present disputes within the Cabinet and especially between the Cabinet and the National Security Council are not only inevitable but maybe healthy. If we bad agreemaybe healthy. If we had agree-ment within the Cabinet and "consistency" of policy in a shifting and ambiguous world, the chances are that things might be even worse than they really are.

The Carter administration may confused about its prioritles and its policies, but it is not confused about Castro, or divided by Vance and Brzezinski.

And there is no doubt about one final thing: as usual, members of the Cabinet and the White House staff are trying to persuade the president to their ways of thinking, but nobody is in doubt here on the central point that President Carter, though he may weer from one side. to another, is still clearly in charge.

Mixed Emotions

The move for public subsidy of students attending private schools and colleges is more of the same. It is a middle-class device for using the government to get back more of what was previously reserved for the poor.

Finally there is the immense nonresponse to the energy crisis. It is a case of the majority thumbing its nose at the authorities — both public and private — that have been burdening them for years with un-popular problems.

Comparing the then and now. accordingly, engenders mixed emotions. The tactics devised to foster minority aspirations are now being used by the majority to protect its taste for easy living. Vice President Mondale said yesterday that he will carry a message of the need for "across-thehoard" restraint on domestic spending to the Democratic Party's liberal consutuencies in coming weeks. Such export proposals have met with emotional opposition in Congress in the past, from members who say it is absurd to export U.S. oil at the same time that the country is importing so much foreign oil

"If you've got a shortage that is the 'moral equivalent of war,' bow can you export what you're short of?" Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H. asked Inter. Mr. Carter used that phrase on April 20 last year when he sent his energy plan to Congress.

But major oil companies, particularly those with large new supplies flowing into the West Coast from Alaska, have pressed for permission to export as a way of reducing the glut, which has threatened to

The decision to grant export li-censes is part of a complicated package of new U.S. energy regula-tions announced at the White House yesterday by Energy Secre-tary James Schlesinger. The export decision applies only to residual fuel oil, a refined product, and not to crude oil. to crude oil.

The regulations include other steps to ease the West Coast glut and a proposal triple subsidies paid to East Coast refiners who import residual fuel oil. The subsidies are paid by refiners elsewhere in the

Over the past 17 years the Chinese have built about 500 miles of two-lane, paved roads in Laos. When construction was at its peak three years ago, the Chinese bad 18,000 combat and engineer troops in the country. The number fell off but was still believed to be 10,000 insurgents in Thailand. Enormous Power of Rudkins' 'The Sons of Light'

By John Walker

ONDON, June 16 (IHT) -David Rudkin's "The Sons of Light" at the Royal Shakespeare Company's Warebouse Theatre is an extraordinary and individual play, powerful and haunting the work of a writer capable of confronting the darkness in our souls.

The play has a ruggedness about it, as if it had been hewn out of rock or some equally intransigent material, as in a sense it has. Rudkin began the play more than 10 years ago, two years after the sensational success of his first work, "Afore Night Come," about ritual rural murder, in an RSC season devoted to the "theater of cruelty."

insanity, cruelty and obscenity far exceeding anything I had ever seen on the stage." Traces of that still remain: There is one scene that takes place over the dismembered body of a man. But the cruelty and insanity — for the play deals with the degradation of society, of terror and of enslavement by false ideals - is now felt rather than expressed. a brooding presence behind the

It is still not perfect. The compression leads to some confusion. Rudkin in the play has created a new world - a society based on repression and cruelty, sustained by specially created myths - to illumine this one. In this, he seems closer to William Blake at his most prophetic than to other dramatists.

But the play can contain intense Rudkin rewrote the play, when it was rejected by the RSC and the National, rewrote it again and submitted it to these two theaters, both of which ignored it. Altogether, the together with angry incoherence.

"The Sons of Light" contrasts an individual's progress from schizo-phrenia to wholeness with the complementary destruction of a society based on industrial slavery and maintained by manipulative dreams of future paradise.
Under Ron Daniels' firm direction, the play has a strong narrative drive of a many-times-told myth or legend. A pastor and his three sons arrive at a remote Scottish island to take over the church. They find the islanders lapsed into a rigid and revengeful religion, giving active or passive support to a vile social experiment. For part of the island is a paramilitary establishment where scientists break down the people's personalities by homosexual violence and reprocess them as automatons who work underground in huge slave factories.

Darkness to Light

The gradual revelation of these horrors is marvelously contrived in the first half of the play. In the second half, the move from darkness to light is less effective and the ending comes as an anu-climax. Rudkin's words — a dense, powerful language for the most part -

When French Use Their Expertise

PARIS, June 16 (IHT) — For the second week French auctioners have scored a significant success. Following the exceptional Jacques Villon print sale (IHT. June 10-11), the same auctioneering group of Ader-Picard-Tajan held on Tuesday an excellent sale of old h master drawings and oils which went well despite the fact that 17 to los remained unsold out of 51.

For Paris, the sale was remarkable in many respects. First, it was entirely devoted to a single categoof art — old master oils and paintings — appealing to a well-defined class of buyers, whether professional or private. This may seem an obviously desirable characteris-ic. Yet, it is quite common in Paris to have a bit of everything — engravings, oils, objets d'art, furnime tapestries — thrown into the same auction. As a result, the most same auction. As a result, the most important dealers and collectors, who might consider making a special trip in Paris for a sale entirely devoted to their own field, seldom show up.

The day, the auctioneers had since the gone out of their way to present a since the consistent sale. They had induced a since the colleague of theirs. only a start in the right direction, the results were financially convincing. The oumber of lots and the importance of a few of them succeeded in attracting an unusually large professional attendance. French drawings of the 18th century went through the roof. Sales-room habitues stared in surprise as two drawings by Louis Leopold Boilly (1761-1845) soared to a fantastic 77,500 francs and 61,000 francs. Done in pen wash and gouache, they illustrate Paris street scenes in a humoristic mood imitated from the English school, A small exquisite landscape in colored pencils by Jean Pillement (1727-1808), dated 1794, went up to 11,400 francs and two very charming sketches of rabbits and sleeping dogs brought 25,800 francs. That served as an hors d'oeuvre to an important sepia wash by Jean-Honore Fragonard, repro-duced a great many times, and an even better-known sketch in black pencil, and red and white chalk, by Antoine Watteau. However famous them to rise respectively to 473,000 francs and 517,000 francs, easily setting world records for drawings by both masters. In both cases, the buyer was a well-known Paris dealer acting, according to professional sources, on behalf on an American collector who has recently stepped into the market of 18th-century drawings of the French school.

This has, of course, given the wbole market a tremendous boost. Nevertheless, prices would not have been so high had it not been for the competition of other interested buyers, who in turn congregated in large numbers because the well-balanced sale was genuinely attractive.
The effect of this organization was less noticeable on oils, partly because few of the main buyers, who are British, had bothered to come and partly because of the paintings - none quite matched the two drawings in rarity and quality.

Two Still Lifes

However, a fine still life by the Flemish artist Ambrosius Boschaert, who worked in the first half petition.

of the 17th century, brought 361,000 francs, which is certainly not less than the price it might have made in Loodon, and a pleasing still life by Jan Van Huysum, dated 1736, rose to 121,000 francs, which is about right. All told, only one picture sold cheaply, a brilliant work by Melchior de Hondecoeter (1636-1695) showing a bird of prey swooping on fowls scuttling off in every direction. At 55,000 francs, it was the day's bargain and will no doubt reappear sooner or later at three times that figure.

The lesson is obvious, Paris can make it if auctioneers are willing to make a greater effort toward pooling artistic resources. Catalogs have recently improved in several cate-gories while in others, such as Islamic art, they are sadly inade-

ATIS DARIS, June 16 (1HT) — A group of French professional nen with an interest in art history that the publication of serious works in this field was virtually impossible in France for a variety of casons. The problems, however, did not seem iosuperable to them.

They got in touch with some of heir friends in museums and uniresides and, with their help and counseling, set up a nooprofit prganization, Arthena (35 Ave. de Bretcuil, Paris 7), whose vocation has become the publication of welllustrated critical works of techniattended cal interest to the art market.

The problem is by no means aly a French one," says Pierre oscuberg, a curator of paintings at the Louvre and one of the three editorial directors of the venture. He said that university presses in the United States were almost roing out of business as far as pubmarket is so restricted," be said.

"Financially," said Jacques Foucart like Mr. Rosenberg a cu-rator at the Louvre and a director of Arthena, "forty people got tosether and put up a sum of money which served to cover publicity and publication costs for the first two volumes. They also gave a lot of their time and expertise. One of them has put his firm's computer at our disposal and we bave a list of over 10,000 names of persons and matimions which would conceivainstitutions which would concernibly be interested in these works. Seven Artists

Toward this end. Carmean has selected from the ocuvres of seven artists - Willem de Kooning, Barnett Newman and Mark Rothko are the other artists represented here - only those works that, in his view, exemplify this interest in a specific "subject" or theme. And in the ambitious catalog that Car-mean and his collaborators have produced for the occasion, the question of what constitutes a "subject" for these artists in these particular works is explored at

The exhibition itself, coosisting of more than 60 paintings and sculptures, may be enjoyed, of course, quite apart from the didactie program that governs it. The primary function of an art exhibition, be it remembered, is not to in-struct us in the arcana of art history or to serve as the basis of a theory, but to give us pleasure — the sort of pleasure that only art of a certain quality and power can bring to our experience. In this respect, certainly, there is more than enough in the "Subjects of the Artists" exhibition to satisfy all but the most dieing and sculpture.

Especially in the north tower gallery, containing 13 of the 26 open-form steel sculptures produced by David Smith in a single month in Italy in 1962, the visitor to this exhibition is offered one of the most exalted experiences that modern art is capable of providing. Smith was a truly great artist, and this installation of his work - designed to

Looking Into 'Subjects' and Abstract Expressionism

By Hilton Kramer

WASHINGTON (NYT) - It was to be expected that the National Gallery of Art would inaugurate its new East Building with, among much else, a major exhibition of abstract expressionism. One of the functions of the East Building is to serve as a showcase of modern art, and abstract expressionism is, after all, the American movement that has won this country its principal claim to a place in the international annals of modern art — a not unimportant considera-tion for a National Gallery of Art.

In preparation for this event and as a visible sign of its commit-ment to build a permanent collection in this field — the museum has recently acquired, among other works, a version of Arshile Gorky's "The Plow and the Song." Jackson Pollock's "Lavender Mist" and Da-vid Smith's "Voltri VII." It also commissioned from Robert Motherwell a new and very large paint-ing in his ongoing series of "Elegies to the Spanish Republic," It is around these works that E.A. Carmean Jr., curator of 20th-century art at the National Gallery, has constructed the inaugural exhibition called "American Art at Mid-Century: The Subjects of the Artists."

art that in recent years has been very largely treated as a purely for-malistic enterprise.

Are we now brought appreciably closer to understanding what it means for abstract are to make claim to a "subject" that is not, literally or sometimes even symbolically, depicted in the work

So far as the exhibition is concerned. I think the answer must be: No, not quite. What is illuminated in the exhibition is something else - the way certain forms, certain visual themes or mouls, certain ways of handling space and the ma-terials used to define it, are made to serve io lieu of a legible or defin-able subject. There are, of course, important differences among the artists represented in this exhibi-tion. Gorky, De Kooning and Smith obviously make use of the son of iconographical materials the other artists here eschew, and we feel the difference in our experience of their work. But this iconography is not what a "subject" is either; it is too quickly absorbed into the im-peratives of style.

And if the visual themes we observe in the work of all seven of alone makes this exhibition an imperative event for anyone interested in modern art word, which suggests the obsence of the very thing we are asked to believe is present? It is not "subjects" that abstract expressionism offers us but evocative forms forms that signify emotions that, given the terms of their expression, are precisely not meant to be expe-

Is it, perhaps, because the art itself simply does not support this kind of inquiry — because, in attempting to approach the problem of "subjects" in a new way, the ab-stract expressionists soon discovered that their true interests, their true feelings and their true artistic imperatives were elsewhere? in West Oermany.
The proposed sale by Union Carand 800 million Deutsche marks bide accounts for the major share of its ethylene derivetives business in Europe. The companies involved are the chemicals division of Union Carbide U.K. and Bakelite Xylonite in Britain, Union Carbide Belginm and laboratory facilities in Geneva. Half of the sale price will be in cash and the remainder in debt obligations of the acquired companies. modest' non-recurring gain to resalt from the transaction, but did not say whether the operations had been profitable.

At a press conference in West Germany, VEBA chairman Rudolf tool Bennigsen-Foerder, said the BP sale would allow his company to concentrate on its crude oil and chemical business. He said the sectors sold to BP accounted for about 3 billion DM of the company's 27 hillion DM annual turnover.

The West German government, which holds a 43.7-percent stake in VERA, approved the sale. Finance Mainter Hans Matthoefer, refering to VERA's 1975 takeover of Gelsenberg's oil, gas and chemicals business, said that "with this step. VEBA has achieved great success in its bid to consolidate VEBA and Gelsenberg activities ... and will strengthen its position as a German cil company."

Under the package, Deustche BP will acquire effective next Jan. I a 25-percent share in Ruhrgas (West Germany's largest gas transmission company), part of the Stinnes Stromeyer group and the Stinnes Fanal organization which has some 1,000 filling stations and other trading linearies a 25-percent stake in Francisco interests, a 25-percent stake in Erdolraffinene Speyer Elf-VEBA Chemie and a 50-percent interest in Erdolraffinerie Ingolstadt.

The oyerall arrangement report-edly will assist Deutsche BP to improve its margins by closer contact with end consumers, to make economies of scale and to penetrale new markets in addition in the 800 million DM puchase price. VEBA will crude oil a year, at market related prices from BP through the year

The agreement with VEBA has yet to be reviewed by earlel office officials in Berlin or at the EEC. Mr. Bennigsen-Foerder said. But. he noted, part of the reason it was accepted in Bonn was that it aflorded a "European solution" lo VEBA's problems.

Deutshee BP said 200 million DM would come from authorized capital and the remaining 600 miltion DM would be funded publicly. VEBA said the proceeds would be invested to expand the company's base in the crude oil market. The company said that although overall profits were up losses were still being recorded in the oil and chemical sectors.

Inflation Cuts Into World Oil Prices

GENEVA. June 15 (AP-DJ) — If the meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries starting here tomorrow follows the expected script, there will he a lot of talk about the price of oil — but the price will remain unchanged.
Inflation and a weak dollar have cut into oil producers' income, but a continuing glut on the world market is expected to restrain prices for another six months, at least. OPEC meetings do not always go as predicted, of course. But it is likely that a behind-the-scenes development here will have a bigger long-range impact on oil consumers than the formal session — even if a surprise price rise develops.

For the organization is about to take a hard look at itself to develop longer-term policies. Immediately after the oil ministers of the 13 member nations conclude their weekend meeting, six of the key ministers will convene the first session of a new special com-mission to plot OPEC's future. The special commission will be seeking answers to some important questions for producers and con-sumers alike: Can OPEC hold together as an effec-tive cartel, setting prices as it sees fit? Can it and should it then produce all the oil the United States and other consuming nations want? Just how the group resolves such policy questions and how it deals with the transition from the current surplus to an expected sellers' market will be vital to the stability of the industrialized world. "We can talk about the future because we are very sure we will get a solution to the (oil surplus) problem we have now, says Valentin Hernandez Acosta, Venezuela's oil minister and a member of the study

Saudi Arabia's Ahmed Zaki Yamani, also a commission member, adds: "The main object of our organization was to protect our price structure. This it did. Now, we must look to the future, the type of oil iodustry we will have and the place OPEC will have

In addition, the commission has a broad mandate to ennsider just about any issue in its planning. Thus, it will probably also be developing long-range policies for such projects as natural-gas exports and petrochemical sales. It will no doubt also promote OPEC's aim of creating a "new economic order" through stepped-up assistance by the world's rich nations for the poor nations.

OPEC nations traditionally have had little political cohesion. The seven Arab states | Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Qatar, Iraq, Al-

OPEC to Confront Issue of Glut geria and Libya) and the six non-arab nations (Iran, Nigeria, Gabon, Indonesia. Venezuela and Ecuador) have had considerable political tensions. in fact. But they have been successfully bound together by economic expedience, with their total oil revenues exceeding $100 billion a year.

Despute the recent sluggishness of the international market. OPEC has managed to maintain the benchmark price of $12.70 a barrel for Saudi Arabinalist and the level that the terrange of the saudi Arabinalist and the level that the terrange of the saudi Arabinalist and the level that the terrange of the saudi Arabinalist and the s an light crude, the level that has prevailed since mid-1977. But the global glut promises to linger until next year and perhaps beyond.

In recent months, the surplus has caused production slowdowns in some countries, which, unlike Saudi Arabia, are facing economic problems because of the cutbacks. This has led to competition for mar-kets by some members and has resulted in discounting of some prices. It has also dimmed chances of increases this year in the official oil price, which been frozen since mid-1977, when the pricing

A consensus in OPEC, in fact, holds that it should try to smooth market swings so that the world's economies, including those of member states, are not

Some observers say that OPEC consequently may already be losing its grip on world markets; others, bowever, suggest the real issue is whether the cartel - and, specifically, Saudi Arabia - can, or will, produce enough oil in the future to meet anticipated

Most observers in and out of OPEC citc the American connection in any discussion of the cartel's outlook. U.S. imports have declined some from last year's record 8.7 million barrels a day, most of it from OPEC. But most studies show that the dip probably is temporary, due largely to the flow of Alaskan North Slope oil, and that by 1979 or 1980. U.S. needs for foreign oil will resume climbing, eventually passing 10 million barrels a day, or more than one-third of OPEC's current output.

The period of supply-demand balance, OPEC planners say, could be just a few months or as long as seven years, depending on how bard consuming nations work to cut consumption of oil, how much new oil might be found and how fast energy substitutes are developed. tutes are developed.

trade and economic activity." In a preliminary version of the report, it says that during this year and in 1979, growth rates in devel-oping countries will be in the 4.5-5 percent range, and thus the average for the first nine years of this decade will work out to 4.8 percent, far short of the targeted 6-percent.

The Unctad report says that the purchasing power of developing countries is not expected to rise over the two-year period under review "and may even decrease." Simultaneously, non-oil developing countries will have to use more than 25 percent of their export earnings to service debts, thus placing "particularly stringent constraints" on the imports of develop-ment-oriented capital goods.

Comecon Eyes Reported Shift In Procedures

LONDON, June 16 (AP-DJ) -East Europe's economic communi-ty, Comecon, is considering a change in its voting procedure that could greatly increase the influence of the Soviet Unioo over member countries' economic policies. The Yugoslav national news agency, Tanjug, reported from Bu-charest that the proposed change is to be considered at a Comecon meeting in the Romanian capital later this month. The change reportedly would re-cuire that decisions approved by a majority of members would be binding oo all member states. At present, Comecon requires e unaninous vote on policy matters.

Western diplomatic observers say the change would make it easier for the Soviet Union to reio in allies when it disagrees with their economic or trade policies.

The Ordinary General Meeting, at which more than $5,000 shareholders representing $9% of the capital stack were present or represented, was held on finday, June 9, 1978, under the Chairmonship of M. Jean DELOSME, President and General Manager. The Meeting convened more than 1,500 shareholders.

The Meeting, after approval of the Board of Directors Report, and that of the Auditors in their entirety, closed the net profit occount for fiscal 1977. These represent 180,240,000 Francs in 1977, compared with 151,637,000 Francs in 1976, Excluding extraordinary capital gains, these profits represent 168,783,000 Francs in 1976.

The Meeting declared a dividend of 11 francs per share applied to a capital in-Fronce per share opplied to a capital in-creased by 25% following the Board's dec-sion of June 29, 1977 which created new thares on the basis of one free share for four existing ones. Talong into account the tax al-ready paid to the Treasury (fiscal credit) for reach past to the freestery freest cream for qualified shareholders, the real revenue per share will amount to Fr. 16.50 and the sums to be distributed to shareholders will then total 1169 million francs, compared with 91.5 million Francs in 1976, which represents on increase of 25% over the preceding year. The General Meeting re-elected as Administrator, M. Jacques MAISONROUGE and elected as new Administrators, M. Pierre LIO-TARD and Mr. Claude Pierre BROSSOLETTE.

ILLNESS AS METAPHOR

INFURIATED by "America's war on Vietnam," Susan Sontag once wrote that "the white race is the cancer of human history." She now regrets the metaphor. She is now as suspicious of "disease metaphors" as she used to be of her-meneutics ("Against Interpreta-tion"). And she regards cancer metaphors as especially pernicious, implicitly genocidal, "cheap shots." The people who have the real disease are . . hardly helped by bearing their disease's name constantly being dropped as the epitome of evil. Only in the most limited sense is any historical event or problem like an illness. And the cancer metaphor is particularly crass. It is invariably an encourage-ment to simplify what is complex and an invitation to self-righteous-ness, if not to fanaticism."

Miss Sontag's point is that "illness is not a metaphor"; that meta-phoric thinking about illness is fantasy thinking and usually punitive (to be sick is to be guilty). When the disease in question is thought to be fatal, like tuberculosis in the 19th century and cancer in the 20th, the metaphors employed to discuss it actually reflect the anxieties and insufficiencies of the culture at large, our feelings about the self and society, our attitudes toward death.

Thus, the 19th century turned tu-berculosis into a kind of romantic sadness, "a disease of the soul,"
"an emblem of refinement." Death was "aestheticized." Think of Little Was aestheticized. Think of Latte Eva, or Mimi in her garret in "La Boheme," or Milly Theale in "The Wings of the Dove," who "turned her face to the wall." Lord Byron looks at his pale face in the mirror and says, "I should like to die of a consumption . . . the ladies would say, "Look at that poor Byron, how interesting he looks in dying." In a splendid passage, Miss Sontag notes: "Perhaps the main gift to sensibility made by the Romantics in the properties of graphy and is not the aesthetics of cruelty and the beauty of the morbid (as Pario Praz suggested in his famous book). or even the demand for unlimited personal liberty, but the nihilistic and sentimeotal idea of the interesting"." We are not romantic about cancer in the 20th century. If TB was somehow refined, cancer is ugly, an somehow refined, cancer is ugly, an "invasion" "a demonic pregnancy," a "pathology of space." If TB "was the disease of the Sick self, cancer is the disease of the Other." If TB was thought, metaphorically, to be a consequence of frustration, cancer is said — by people who should know better — to be "the wages of repression." Miss Sontag gets quite angry at propagandizers for "sublimated spirimalism." for "will mated spiritualism." for "will power" as a cure for "mental states."

"There is," she says, "a peculiarly modern predilection for psychological explanations of disease, as of everything else. Psychologizing seems to provide control over the experiences and events (like grave illnesses) over which people have in fact little or no control. Psychological understanding undermines the 'reality' of a disease. That reality has to be explained . . . For those who live neither with religious consolations about death oor with a sense of death (or of anything) as natural, death is the obscene mystery, the ultimate affront, the thing that cannot be controlled. It can only be denied."

This is very good. All of "Illness as Metaphor," in fact, is very good. With her book last year, "On Photography," with this essay and with a forthcoming volume of short stories, Miss Sontag is oo a creative binge. Her own widely publicized health problems doubtless account for the tooe and content of "Illness as Metaphor," but they also proba-bly account for its lucidity. It is burned clean of mannerism and of

The writer who once spoke of "a dedicated agnosticism about reality itself" insists on confronting reality head-on — the reality of cancer and the reality of death, beyond fantasy and euphemism and denial and the fearful projections of a sick culture. See it clearly, she says. Name it in-stead of evading it. Be "morally

Moreover, the writer who could fairly be said to have propagan-dized, herself, on behalf of madness — at least in art — as a proof of grace, now tells us: "Not TB but insanity is the current vehicle of our secular myth of self-transcendence . . . now it is insanity that is thought to bring consciousness to a state of paroxysmic enlightenment. The romanticizing of madness reflects in the most vehement way the contemporary prestige of irrational or rude [spontaneous] behavior [acting out]. . ."

Agreed: another metaphor that ought to be junked. I wonder, though, if we can help ourselves. Death in itself isn't evil; it is normal. But as surely as we will dic. we are machines for making meta-phors about it. Metaphors are our way of thinking about death, as well as our way of pretending oot to think about it. From the beginning, in all art and all religions, these are the oets we cast to snare the terror, to pull back the loneli-ness. What we need is a critic of metaphors, and here, unflinchingly, li was a performance that has the Italian manager, Enzo Bearzot, no doubt foxing once more, saying that the Netherlands is now the favorte to get to the final from the group that involves the Germans, Italians, Dutch and Austrians.

The Germany-Netherlands meet ing illustrates best the lack of stars and of leadership bere: no Kaiser Franz Beckenbauer, who is playing for the New York Cosmos right now, and no Johan Cruyff, who is working for television in England. retired at the age of 30.

Germany is still waiting for Rainer Bonhof, its midfield catalyst to flower. Bonhof came here with a reputation to defend, but with a tired frame and the residual incapacity of ligament trouble suf-fered only two months ago. Not until the dying moments of Wednes-day's draw with Italy did he let go of the safety rail and suggest that the old marauding spirit is there. Sunday will not be too soon to prove the point, either for Bonhof, or for Klaus Fischer, the little German center-forward whom all goal aspirations are directed toward. Germany will miss the improving midfield touches of Heinz Flobe against the Netherlands and may even need to recall, against the senior pros' wishes, young Hansi Muller, but the Dutch have more injury problems and could again be without Johan Neeskens, Wim Suurbier and Wim Rijsbergen. three driving and determined old

In the end it will be a question of attitudes: will the Netherlands revert to the dour, dirty defensive methods it used throughout round one? Will Germany rediscover the shooting boots it used in the 6-0

234 Players Go In the NHL Draft

MONTREAL. June 16 (AP) — The 17 National Hockey League clubs selected 234 players in the amateur draft yesterday, with center Bobby Smith of the Ottawa '67s chosen first.

The Minnesota North Stars, bolstered earlier in the day when they lost only two players in a special dispersal draft for the merged roster of the North Stars and the defunct Cleveland Barons, surprised no one when they opened the draft by taking Smith.

The signing of the 6-foot-4-inch center, who had 69 goals and 123 assists, last season was announced later in the day. Smith signed a four-year contract, but terms were not disclosed. The Washington Capitals select-ed center Ryan Walter of the Seattle Breakers of the Western Canada Hockey League with the second choice in the draft and announced his signing bours later.

Blues Heavy Drafters

The St. Louis Blues, who made right wing Wayne Babych of the Portland Winter Hawks the third choice, drafted 30 players, the most of any team. The Montreal Canadiens had the second-highest total with 24, while the Pittsburgh Penguins selected only 3 players, the fewest in the draft.

In the dispersal draft of former Minnesota-Cleveland players, St. Louis chose forward Mike Crom-been and Vancouver took Randy The amateur draft, which lasted 22 rounds before all clubs passed, was the concluding event of the annual NHL meetings.

Flyers Trade Three

PHILADELPHIA, June 16 (UPI) — The Philadelphia Flyers traded center Orest Kindrachuk, left wing Ross Lonsberry and defensernan Tom Bladon to the Pittsburgh Penguins yesterday for choices in the amateur draft and "undisclosed considerations."

The NBA Board of Governors, at its annual summer meeting here this week, voted to accept the recommendation of the league's Com-petition and Rules Committee and "put some teeth into the zone rule." according to the committee chairman, Joe Axelson, president of the Kansas City Kings.

The key change in the rule in question, Rule 12A, Secton 1, is a note that states, "When a ball has passed center court, no defensive player can guard an area of the court instead of guarding an opponent."

In other major business, the board voted to experiment with the 3-point field goal in the next exhihition season, then evaluate whether it should be used in regular season play. It will not be used in the 1978-79 regular season.

A Visiting Professor of Film Turns 92

HANOVER, N.H. (NYT) — Last October, when Congress was considering legislation barring compulsory retirement, John G. Kerneny, president of Dartmouth College, urged that colleges he permitted to force retirement at the age of 65. He noted that "exceptionally able" teachers could be invited to continue. "Dartmouth," he wrote, "which has mandatory retirement at 65, also has a very popular 91-year-old visiting profes-

Since then, the bill has become law and Arthur L. Mayer, the 91-year-old professor, has turned 92.

Twice weekly, he looks about him at the 150 to 175 students who have mastered that day's surge of spring fever, and launches into his course, "Histo-ry of Film," as though there was oot a reel to be omitted. His tone is self-deprecatory, pitched for laughs, and the phrases are hybrid, nurtured on Variety prose, Hollywood press-agentry and cootemporary film criticism. . "Listen to me very carefully," he counsels, "A, because it's important, B, because it's probably an examination question."

"I grade quite easily," he said, when there were no students around, "and I can't bear to flunk anyone. Nonetheless, I want to be tough, not a pushover — that's my ambition. 'God, please make me a little tougher, and not mellow' - that's my daily prayer. You wouldn't want to be a kindly, sweet old man, would you?"

Mayer wandered into academe when Brandeis University, evidently confusing him with Louis B. Mayer, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, asked for a donation.

"I said I couldn't give them a million dollars," Mayer recalled, "but I'd like to do something for them. They expected a few thousand dollars, and they were very much disappointed when I offered to teach; they'd have preferred a few thousand dollars."

A Dartmouth vice president then persuaded Mayer to lecture at Dartmouth, and suddenly a lively veteran in his 70s was doing about the only thing he had oot done in the film business — perform for an audience.

"f don't know how much my students learn," Mayer said, "but I learn a lot from them. f liked the students very much I2 or 15 years ago, when there was a strong spirit of rebellion. f didn't always like what they were rebelling against, but the spirit was good.

A couple of weeks ago, he estimated that he had seen about 45,000 films. "It's time for me to do something else," he said. "I don't know what it is." So the suitcases come out and the Mayers prepare for a migration. "Maybe after 10 years we ought to know enough to stay at home," Mrs. Mayer suggested. "I think we're on the last packup," he rejoined, not believing a word of it. "ft's the fatal failing of everybody — you've got to do it just once more," he

So much is going to happen in the oext 20 years that we're going to miss."

"She has a greater enthusiasm for life that f have," Mayer said. "I'm not quite as joyful about getting up in the morning. When I think about my life, I feel hap-py. When I think about the world, f feel morose."

"If you're not cheerful, you're going to be a pain in the neck," Mrs. Mayer commented.

When a California bank iovited them to speak about the "golden years," the Mayers refused. "All my capacities have slipped in the last 15 years," Mayer said. "I can't play tennis any more. I doo't write as well. my eyesight is poorer. We doo't regard them as golden years. We resolved to make these years useful - not golden, useful,"

Pope Bars Marriage PEOPLE: Of Prince, Divorcee

A Roman Catholic church mar-riage between Prince Michael of Kent and an Austrian divorcee has been refused by Pope Paul VI, the church said. An official church statement said that the reason is that Prince Michael, a member of Britain's Anglican (Protestant) royal family, wants their children brought up as Anglicans and not as Catholics. The 35-year-old soldierprince planned a white wedding in Austria early next month to Baroness Marie-Christine von Reibnitz, 33. a Catholic. Her marriage to merchant banker Tom Troubridge ended last year. The baroness was granted a papal annulment last month. A spokesman for the prince said the couple are "very said the couple are 'very distressed' over the Vatican deci-sion. Prince Michael was 16th in succession to the British crown. Follow-up: Some weeks ago it was reported that Richard and Shirley Hansen, now living in Honolulu, were being sued by their son, Thomas, of Boulder, Colo., for "malpractice of parenting." Their soo asked for $350,000 in his damage. age suit, contending that, because of the way his parents reared him. he'll need the money for future psy-chiatric care. Now former friends and neighbors in Boulder have set up a "Good Parents Fund" to help the Hansens pay expenses io de-fending themselves against their son's charges. Dorothy Riddle, a friend of the family, said that the Hansens have been paying for their son's psychiatric care with their own insurance. "The lawyer for this young boy should have thought about this a bit more," she said.
